An Act to amend the Copyright and Related Rights Act 2000 to ensure that the online, digital output of the nation is collected and preserved so that citizens and researchers, within the country and abroad, are guaranteed permanent access to the intellectual and cultural memory of the nation.

Be it enacted by the Oireachtas as follows:

10

Amendment of Copyright and Related Rights Act 2000

1. The Copyright and Related Rights Act 2000 is amended in section 198 by the insertion of the following subsection after subsection (4A):

“(4B) (a) It shall not be an infringement of the rights conferred by this Act if a Board or authority to which this section applies reproduces any work that is made available in the State through the internet.

15

(b) Where any work has been made available in the State through the internet without a restriction as to its access or use, then it shall not be an infringement of the rights conferred by this Act if a Board or authority to which this section applies reproduces that work and makes it available through the internet without a restriction as to its access or use, whether or not that work continues to be available elsewhere through the internet.

20

(c) For the purposes of this subsection, a work shall have been made available in the State through the internet where—

25

(i) it is made available to the public either from a website with a domain name which relates to the State or to a place within the State, or by similar or related means, or

(ii) it is made available to the public either by a person any of whose activities relating to the creation or the publication of the digital publication takes place within the State, or by a person with similar or related connections to the State.”
